With the world economic crisis, many non-profit organizations have been forced to cut corners on programming, or worse, closed their doors entirely. At Chabad, we refuse to allow the negativity to impact us. In fact, it drives us to work even harder than ever before to not only survive, but to thrive in the face of financial pressure.

In the past year Chabad on Campus affiliates grew to 144 campuses worldwide with 14 Chabad on Campus emissaries embarking this year. Over 850 students joined together for the International Student Shabbaton in New York, making it the largest gathering of our targeted demographic outside of Israel. Our renowned Israelinks: In depth Israel Experience doubled in size this year, hosting over 70 students. For the first time Chabad and JNF cosponsored a winter break experience, 40 students went to Israel on an educational and agricultural mission. Sinai Scholars grew to 45 schools and nearly 1700 graduated from the program. To aid our affiliates in combating the current financial pressures, Chabad on Campus instituted the Strategic Initiative.

Chabad on Campus is an active and growing integral asset to campuses worldwide. We are committed to growth because we are committed to the needs of Jewish students everywhere.
The first full-service Chabad House opened in 1969 at the campus of UCLA, with the blessings and encouragement of the Lubavitcher Rebbe. Since then Chabad has opened student centers at some 130 universities and colleges around the world, the vast majority in a campaign of rejuvenation initiated in 2000 with the support of the Rohr Family Foundation.

Additionally, Chabad-Lubavitch regional centers provide resources for students at 200 other universities worldwide.

At Chabad, every Jewish student is family!

Chabad Houses

The Chabad House is the focal point of our work on campus. Sometimes it can be a sprawling facility or the apartment of a fledgling Chabad House. During the 2008-09 school year, we were elated to welcome 14 new couples onto our Chabad on Campus team, and to dedicate several new Chabad Houses! Chabad Jewish Student Centers now operate on 144 campuses worldwide. Chabad-Lubavitch regional centers provide Jewish resources at an additional 200 universities.

As we continue to expand, Chabad Student Centers are currently active on campuses with more than two-thirds of American Jewish students. During this past school year alone, our preliminary reports indicate that some 75,000 students participated in one or more Chabad on Campus programs or events.

Shabbat & Holiday Programming

Shabbat is the focus of the Jewish week. At Chabad on Campus we take Shabbat seriously. Chabad's legendary Shabbat dinners are fun and meaningful, inspiring and full of warmth. Each week more than 6,000 students join the local Chabad family for a home-cooked meal, lots of singing, discussion and socializing at their "home away from home." Whether there are 20 or 200 people around the table(s), every participant is, indeed, family.

Holidays are no different. While families all over are enjoying the festive atmosphere, Chabad on Campus assures that students who are left on campus do not feel left out.

During the High Holidays, Chabad staff roam the campus to blow Shofar and invite students to the Chabad House. More than 6,000 responded, joining the Chabad family for inspiring services and delectable festival meals.

Instilling Jewish pride is a major focus of Chabad's efforts. This is especially true during the winter holiday season. Before Chanukah, Chabad on Campus
Educational Programming On Campus

A hallmark of Chabad's activities is the level of Jewish scholarship available to students. The in-depth Judaic knowledge that the emissaries possess is utilized to its fullest as students can avail themselves of a variety of topics and settings.

Chabad staff provide weekly classes, one-to-one learning and more advanced courses on myriad topics ranging from the simple (aleph bet, basic overviews of Jewish topics) to intermediate and advanced (Talmud study, Kabbalah & Chasidic philosophy). Whether at the Chabad House, a campus lecture hall or a local coffee shop, over 3,500 students each week take advantage of the emissaries willingness to share what they know about Jewish thought and practice in an open and non-judgmental environment.

To add spice to the menu of classes, and to inspire additional students, Chabad affiliates invited more than 450 special guest lecturers for special events. These speakers range from the Chief Rabbi of Israel to noted academics, accomplished business leaders, national politicians and jurists. While the speakers and topics were diverse, all of them made a great impression on students as they shared their passion for Jewish life and commitment.

Outlook to the future:

The last year has been tumultuous to say the least. As a network, Chabad on Campus has embarked on a program of ambitious growth while keeping a keen eye on the challenges we need to overcome. The Foundation undertook an ambitious plan to help our affiliates better organize and focus so as to achieve even greater results.

The Chabad on Campus International Foundation office has conducted extensive internal soul-searching in order to become even more effective in achieving an even higher level of excellence. Our strategic planning has helped us crystallize the short and medium goals we’d like to reach in furtherance of our mission.

distributed holiday kits - complete with Menorah, Dreidel and holiday guide - to thousands of students, including a drive by the Chabad on Campus International Foundation to provide Menorahs for students on isolated campuses with limited Jewish resources, reminding them that they were not forgotten by the Jewish community.

Passover is traditionally a time for family gatherings. For those forced to stay on campus during this special season, Chabad on Campus invited them into their homes for Passover Seders at more than 100 campuses. At least 50 student centers also offered kosher-for-Passover meals for the complete eight-day festival.
International Shabbaton

On November 7, 2008, hundreds of students left their campus behind and experience an authentic Shabbat weekend with 850 of like-minded proudly Jewish students from colleges around the world.

The International Shabbaton provided a genuine Jewish experience, with students being welcomed by the notably hospitable local Chabad community and enjoying the beauty and warmth of Shabbat at an elegant dinner table. Throughout the weekend professors, scholars and lecturers lead discussions on Jewish thought and the interplay of Judaism and issues from science to environmentalism to volunteerism to feminism.

The Shabbaton not only invigorates the hundreds of participants. Students go back to their respective schools ready to involve their friends in on-campus Jewish programming.

National Student Leadership Conference

Chabad on Campus recognizes that the students of today are the leaders of tomorrow. With so many students active in individual Chabad Houses as student leaders, the National Student Leadership Conference united 50 students from 40 schools nationwide for an invigorating conference. The extended weekend gave the student leaders the opportunity to discuss campus activism with leaders of Jewish organizations, network with leaders of industry, receive hands-on leadership training and share programming and recruiting ideas with dozens of like minded e-board members from schools across the United States.

The students returned to campus empowered to progress and expand with the tools gained at the Leadership Conference.

Campus Kinus

Over 100 Shluchim and 90 Shluchos from student centers worldwide came together for three days of workshops, sharing ideas, learning best practices and hearing from professionals in development, marketing and programming.

The excitement of the Shluchim for the conference reverberates year round. But this year it was much more. The emphasis on practical workshops in fundraising, programming, and personal issues made its mark, with the attendees talking about the extended beneficial effects of the conference. Additionally, this year there was an additional focus on the Strategic Initiative, which empowered many shluchim to continue their fundraising and budgeting effort in a more systematic and organized way.

Most importantly the individual emissaries are reminded and recognize how they are all a part of the large Chabad on Campus community. The emissaries return to their campuses with renewed energy and spirit, and with new tools to aid in their important work.
Israelinks

The IsraeLinks: In depth Israel experience makes a real difference in the lives of Jewish students. This three-week program is geared to students who have already been to Israel and would like to go back with a more intense program that allows them to more fully explore their Jewish heritage.

The IsraeLinks program recently completed its third year. It not only assists students in strengthening their Jewish knowledge and commitment, but enables them to go back to their campuses inspired to assist Chabad and other Jewish organizations in getting others involved in Jewish life. They are becoming true ambassadors for Judaism.

Due to its popularity, Israelinks open its trip to a second session this past summer, enabling double the amount of student participation and a more flexible schedule so as to allow more students to join.

Regional Shabbaton

Regional Shabbatons specifically focus on Israel activism and Jewish pride. Students from larger and smaller schools have the opportunity to meet with other students in the same demographic area. The exchange of ideas and renewed excitement drastically change the level of Jewish activity throughout the region.

Chabad on Campus hosted Shabbaton weekends on the West Coast, Mid-West, in Florida and Texas; bring hundreds of relatively local students together for a weekend enthused with the joys of Judaism.

Sinai Scholar Society

Sinai Scholars Society is an integrated program encompassing Torah study, social activities, and national networking opportunities that introduces students to the contemporary significance of the Jewish experience. Participants have the chance to interact with other students across the country as well as distinguished figures from the world of business and public life as they engage in this unique prospect for Jewish self-discovery.

The curriculum at the Sinai Scholars Society doesn’t just pick up where Hebrew school left off. Our courses present the living tradition of authentic Jewish scholarship. We address important issues in modern life in light of the ancient sources, and give you a chance to find your voice in a discussion that stretches across three millennia. Intriguing, challenging, and sophisticated, the learning experience at Sinai Scholars draws you into the pure pleasure of Torah study. More than inspiring and thoughtful - it is also fun.

Sinai Scholar Society is active on 45 campuses, with over 1500 students graduating last semester.
Fourteen full service Chabad Student Centers were established, bringing the total to 145.

Chabad on Campus in the United Kingdom doubled, now boasting ten student centers.

5000 birthright israel applicants chose our preferred trip provider, Mayanot, for a ten-day trip to Israel, accompanied by their favorite Chabad Rabbis and Rebbetzins.

International Student Shabbaton attendance grew 20% to 800 students.

6303 Shabbos meals served by Chabad on Campus each week.

IsraeLinks, our popular three-week educational adventure, added an additional trip and doubled the number of participants.

Leaders of Chabad student boards from dozens of schools nationwide were further empowered at the inaugural National Student Leadership Conference.

Chabad on Campus International Staff Conference attracted a record crowd of more than 200 Rabbis and Rebbetzins for three days of intense seminars and networking.

On any given week 4,036 students chose to enrich their Jewish knowledge at one of 569 classes or lectures hosted by Chabad on Campus.

First annual Bring-a-Friend Shabbat was developed in response to the Mumbai terror attacks. Students at hundreds of universities worldwide invited their friends to celebrate Shabbat together.

More than 600 students celebrated 40 years of Chabad on Campus at the Chabad House where it all started - UCLA. Students came from 20 schools across the West Coast for the largest ever regional Shabbaton.
